Prsentation de l'diteurHer beloved great aunt wants to barbecue dad's side-kick, Bruce the goat, her man-hungry cousin has her sights set on her top pilot, and her new hire is really a CPA hiding from a vicious Las Vegas hitman. Then things really start to get messy.Nominated for a Global Award in Mystery"Janet Evanovich meets aero-ag pilots." Emily Anderson for The Kindle Book "I'm so happy that Lalla Bains is back! This is was my favorite book of the three and it's all there: crime, mystery, suspense and great characters! I really liked the glimpses into Lalla's thoughts as she goes back and forth with new theories. Her dad completely lost in a house full of women as Lalla's great-aunt and her cousin (Pearlie) come from Texas for her wedding is hilarious. I Matos, review" This author is an exceptional talent bringing her characters to life--you feel like you've met them before! My only regret--I am finished reading and have to wait who knows how long for my next "fix" from this author! Read it and enjoy!" My only regret--I am finished reading and have to wait who knows how long for my next "fix" from this author! Read it and enjoy!" Tech Teacher, Biographie de l'auteur I sort of fell into the job of running a crop-dusting business when my dad decided hed rather go on a cruise than take another season of lazy pilots, missing flaggers, testy farmers and horrific hours. After two years at the helm, I handed him back the keys and fled to a city without any of the above. And no, I was never a crop-duster. I write about a tall, blond and beautiful ex-model turned crop-duster who, to quote Lalla Bains, says: Ive been married so many times they oughta revoke my license. I wanted to give readers a peek at the not so-perfect - life of a beautiful blond. Lalla Bains is no Danielle Steele character, shes not afraid of chipping her manicure. Scratch that, the girl doesnt have time for a manicure what with herding a bunch of recalcitrant pilots and juggling work orders just to keep her fathers flagging business alive.
