Prsentation de l'diteurWARNING! If you read this book on the beach you may lose track of time and get sunburnt...A real page-turner and evocative of a lovely life style perhaps lost to many of us in the modern world - Dad PadIn a tangible portrayal of rural Greek Life, The Explosive Nature of Friendship is a compelling tale of humour, heartache and regret as we follow one mans reflection of his unruly and mischievous past.Easily led in his younger years, Mitsos would often find himself hurtling head first down the wrong path, usually with his best friend Manolis leading the way. Old Greek traditions of arranged marriage and inheritance strongly influence the choices of two wilful young men, eventually culminating in life changing consequences. Now an old man leading a life of solitude and order, Mitsos less eventful existence is suddenly interrupted by the arrival of his young nephew. In a bid to amuse the child, he begins recounting tales of romance and calamity from his own youth, and finds himself face to face with a painful past; with one event in particular he is yet to come to terms with, one that has haunted him every day for twenty years. With hindsight now in his favour, can hope and compassion finally prevail? Will Mitsos ever come to forgive himself, and will those around him be able to do the same? Presentation de l'auteur WARNING! If you read this book on the beach you may lose track of time and get sunburnt... A real page-turner and evocative of a lovely life style perhaps lost to many of us in the modern world - Dad Pad In a tangible portrayal of rural Greek Life, The Explosive Nature of Friendship is a compelling tale of humour, heartache and regret as we follow one mans reflection of his unruly and mischievous past. Easily led in his younger years, Mitsos would often find himself hurtling head first down the wrong path, usually with his best friend Manolis leading the way. Old Greek traditions of arranged marriage and inheritance strongly influence the choices of two wilful young men, eventually culminating in life changing consequences. With hindsight now in his favour, can hope and compassion finally prevail? Will Mitsos ever come to forgive himself, and will those around him be able to do the same? Biographie de l'auteur Sara Alexi was born in Oxford, England. She has travelled widely and now spends much of her time in a tiny rural village in the Peloponnese, in Greece, where she is (very slowly!) renovating a ruined stone farmhouse, whilst observing the Greek way of life and absorbing the culture, to enrich her vision for both writing and painting. Sara began writing later in life. In school English lessons were a time of confusion, books indecipherable hieroglyphics. Dyslexia was not well understood then and no support was available. The joy of reading and writing were cancelled by the teacher's red pen ... Despite her dyslexia Sara qualified as a psychotherapist and ran her own practice for years. Her artistic nature was, at that time, confined to painting and she exhibited widely. In a casual conversation with a client she discovered that Agatha Christie, Jules Verne and Hans Christian Andersen were all dyslexic, and Sara's perspective changed. The world of fiction opened to her with this shift in perception and she has been a prolific writer ever since. Her 'Greek Village Series' has been very well received and provides a keenly observed, compassionate insight into the Greek people and culture, and the human condition in general.
